Our deluded triends, the directory of the Cumberland and Ohio railroad, have arrived in Cincinnat. They have presented their claims. They have bad a conference. The Chemnati papers shine with pretty light promises, and all is lovely and the goose hangs exceedingly high. It is really nice. "Will you," says the spider to the fly, "will you walk into my parier?" Our friends you walk into my parier to see my, winy you walk into my parier to Your friends have walked in, and a very richly-furnished parior it is, and doubtless they are cajoying themselves. But they had best take care. Cincinnati has some curious old tricks of her own, which are illustrated by the fable of the cast that used the paw of the monkey for the purpose of public monitor when we say to them, take care! she is fooling thee!" Hornce and the People.

It is a little curious, but it is certainly true, that there is a sort of good-humored willingness—a pleasurable realgnation—not to say a sense of dewnright gratification— experienced by the robust and generous Democracy of this part of the cennity in the fact that Horace-Greeley ran ahead the fact that Horsce-Greeley ran ahead of his ticket the other day in New York. Thathe should be defeated was desired most heartily and universally. But the beys hoped he would get a better vote than Sigel, and so he did, and the circumstance authors a sense of poetic justice at a cost which is really trivial. As there is a meaning in everything, what is the meaning of this I's meaning is very creditable, we think, to the times and to the people, and it furnishes a hopfell angury for the tuture.

Hersee Greeley has been, any time these five-and-twenty years, and is fo-day, the representative of a class of opinions held in most shorreme by the Democratio people of every part of this country. He is recognized as the most unyleiding, as he is certainly the most efficient, apostle of these measures of government to whose overthrow are devoting all our energies. But the people said that he has maintained his errors in thrully and consistently as well as ably, and they respect him for what they should bear him no private malice is as evidence that he cannot be a very bad man, though they consider him a most blundering politician, and is as honorable

The original suggestion with which we started has carried us somewhat out of the narrow channel of personal gossip into the depths of current politics. We were about to forget our old friend Horace and his little triumph of last Tuesday. But all that we have said is germain to him. He is the very head and front of the mighty revolution we have traced, and he is most powerful because he is understood to be a simple-minded and an honest man, who, having great takens for statement and none for State-craft, and representing with force and effect a provincialism without perceiving its real purpose, is every day piling up for New England a debt which will cost her all she has hitherto acquired.

That which we set out to say is this, that we should me no wise confound the personality of Mr. Greeley, who will prevently pass away, with his influence which will do most damage to his country after he is gone. At the same time we call attention to the amiability with which is he becoved by his most carniest political enemies as a hopeful sign of the times.
